

Call for Papers for the InterAsia Water(s) Graduate Conference hosted by Yale InterAsia Initiative, May 28th-29th, 2021

This conference aims to bring together rich emerging scholarship on water and waterscapes from different perspectives: biophysical, cultural, historical, and political. It also draws attention to how past and present waters are created and experienced — and future waters imagined and constructed — in and across Asian and interAsian regions.

Scholars and practitioners from around the world working across disciplines such as anthropology, art history, environmental studies, geography, history, law, linguistics, literature, philosophy, science and technology studies, sociology, and urban studies are invited to submit abstracts or register attendance for the conference on this link.

Abstracts are due March 5th, 2021.

For additional information, please see visit website:
<https://campuspress.yale.edu/interasiawaters2021>.